Heads of Central European Countries Support Croatia

VARNA, Bulgaria, May 19 – Thirteen Presidents of Central European countries met in Varna for their annual summit and confirmed they had a major common goal – a united Europe. The Heads of State of Central Europe supported the admission of Bulgaria and Romania to the European Union as well as Croatia's entry into the Union as soon as possible.

The debate at the summit of thirteen Presidents of Central European countries held in the Bulgarian seaside resort of Varna confirmed that the countries of Central Europe not only share much of their history but also have a major common goal – a united Europe. [The Heads of State of Germany, Italy, Romania, Serbia and Montenegro did not attend]

This unity of purpose is there despite the fact that they are at different stages of development at the moment. Some are already EU members, others are in the process of accession and still others are only beginning their journey towards the EU.

The participants concluded that Europe cannot be truly united until all the countries of Central and Southeast Europe complete the accession process and become members.

Despite the fact that the European Commission has warned that it could postpone the decision on Bulgarian and Romanian accession, the two countries are generally expected to meet the remaining criteria. In addition to the support expressed for their aspirations, most participants also supported Croatia's membership speedy into the EU.

Croatian President Stjepan Mesić greeted this expression of support as an important gesture. He reiterated his oft-heard opinion that Europe and the U.S. will become real partners only when Europe is fully united. President Mesić also said that Europe would prove an even match for the U.S. and other competitors when united.

Prime Minister Sanader Meets with Heads of Government

ZAGREB, Croatia, May 18 – 23 - Last week Croatian Prime Minister Ivo Sanader met with Finish Prime Minister Matti Vanhanen, Macedonian Prime Minister Vlado Bučkovski and Slovakian Prime Minister Mikulas Džurinda

During its presidency of the European Union in the second half of this year, Finland will continue supporting EU enlargement, Finnish Prime Minister Matti Vanhanen said during his visit to Zagreb. Finland takes over the six-month EU presidency from Austria on July 1 this year. The Finnish Prime Minister said that the EU must honor its obligations and that Croatia will become a EU member as soon as it meets all the requirements. Prime Minister Sanader said that Croatia expects most reports on negotiation chapters to be completed during the Finnish presidency and that he expects those six months to be very dynamic.

In Macedonia, Prime Minister Sanader concluded with Macedonian Prime Minister Vlado Bučkovski that relations are good and constantly improving, especially when it comes to the common goal for Croatia and Macedonia – EU and NATO membership.

During his visit to Slovakia, Prime Minister Sanader met with his counterpart, Mikulas Džurinda. The two Prime Ministers noted the “excellent” relationship between their countries. Regarding Croatia's path to the EU, Slovakian Prime Minister Džurinda said that “we will try to eliminate all unnecessary obstacles on the path of Croatia to the EU,” adding that the EU should consider Croatia's membership individually, not tied with possible membership of Turkey.

U.S. Military Honor Posthumously Awarded to Family of Peter Tomich

SPLIT, Croatia, May 18 – The family of Croatian American soldier, Chief Watertender Peter Tomich Herceg, received the posthumous Congressional Medal of Honor awarded in recognition of distinguished conduct in the line of duty during the 1941 attack on Pearl Harbor.

Retired Croatian Army Lt. Col. Srećko Herceg Tomich received the U.S. military's highest award on behalf of the Tomich family. Tomich, a U.S. citizen of Croatian heritage, served in the U.S. Navy during World War II. He was born in 1893 in Prolog, in what is now Bosnia and Herzegovina, on the Croatian border. After coming to the United States, Tomich enlisted in the U.S. Army at Fort Slocum, in New Rochelle, N.Y., on June 6, 1917. After service in World War I, he enlisted in the U.S. Navy on January 23, 1919 rising to the rank of chief watertender, equivalent to today's chief petty officer.

Tomich was awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously for his heroic actions aboard the battleship USS Utah on December 7, 1941, during the surprise Japanese attack at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. During the attack, USS Utah sustained major damage from a Japanese torpedo and gunfire. Knowing the ship would sink, Tomich returned to his post in the boiler room to evacuate the personnel and keep the boilers from exploding so he could get as many men as possible out alive before the ship sank. Tomich scarified his own life to save the lives of his shipmates. A destroyer, the USS Tomich was named in his honor in 1943, and the Navy's Senior Enlisted Academy in Newport, R.I., is housed in Tomich Hall.

Croatia Elected to UN Commission for Peacebuilding

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 17 – Croatia was elected to the United Nations Peacebuilding Commission, a newly-established advisory body aimed at helping countries emerging from conflict not to revert to violence. Croatia is the first Southeast European country to join this UN body.

The election of Croatia into the UN Commission for Peacebuilding is one of the greater diplomatic successes on the path of Croatian affirmation in the international community, said Minister of Foreign Affairs and European Integration Kolinda Grabar-Kitarović. [Photo: Večernji list]

The UN Commission for Peacebuilding was established in December 2005 as part of reform efforts at the world body and focuses on peacekeeping, stabilization, reconstruction and institutional development in countries in transition from war to peace. It has 31 members that are chosen by the UN General Assembly. Seven members come from the Security Council, seven from the Economic-Social council, five from the ranks of countries that give the largest financial contributions to the EU, five are the biggest contributors to peace missions and seven are from the General Assembly, chosen by regional key. Croatia elected from the General Assembly.

Strategy for Croatia's Development through 2013 Presented

ZAGREB, Croatia, May 15 – Croatian Prime Minister Ivo Sanader has said that a framework for Croatia's strategic development in the 2006 – 2013 period should help the country accelerate its economic growth beyond five percent and that the average income per capita should rise from the current 54 percent to 75 percent of the European average.

Presenting a document define Croatia's main development goals until 2013, Prime Minister Sanader said that the strategy envisaged the reduction of the unemployment rate from the current 12.7 percent to 9 percent in 2010. The document entitled "The Strategic Framework for the Development and Competitiveness of Croatia" was launched at an event organized by the Croatian National Competitiveness Council [NVK]. The strategy elaborates ten sectors of strategic importance, which require the achievement of excellence. Excellence should become a Croatia brand, Prime Minister Sanader said on this occasion. The State Secretary of the Central Office for the Development Strategy, Martina Dalić, said that the main objective of the strategy was to achieve social prosperity through development and employment in a market economy. The authors of the strategy also attach great importance to education, its adjustment to the needs of the economy, the promotion of lifelong learning, the reduction of poverty, and reform of the social welfare system.

Secondary School to Become Mandatory

ZAGREB, Croatia, May 15 - Prime Minister Ivo Sanader and Minister of Education Dragan Primorac have announced that attendance of secondary school will become mandatory as of fall 2007. The move is part of the Government's development strategy, which relies on the acquisition of knowledge and skills in order to make Croatia more competitive internationally.

Minister of Science, Education and Sport Dragan Primorac have announced that the attendance of secondary school will become mandatory as of fall 2007. With this initiative, the Croatian educational system will become one of the most competitive in Europe by 2010 and will help in the fight against unemployment. [Photo: Ministry of Science, Education and Sport]

Prime Minister Ivo Sanader and Minister of Science, Education and Sport Dragan Primorac have announced that the attendance of secondary school will become mandatory as of fall 2007. Currently, only primary school is mandatory. According to the available data, 18 – 25 percent of children who complete primary school do not finish secondary school. A staggering 45 percent of Croatians have only primary school education or even less. This is a huge obstacle for the Government development strategy, which relies on knowledge. "Without knowledge, we cannot be competitive tomorrow," said Prime Minister Sanader adding that the new rules will turn the Croatian educational system into the most competitive in Europe by 2010 and help in the fight against unemployment.

Swiss tennis superstar Roger Federer was named Laureus World Sportsman of the year for the second consecutive year with the women's honor going to Croatian skier Janica Kostelić. The 23-year-old Kostelić, who won the women's combined event at the Turin Olympics, beat off rivals including Yelena Isinbayeva, the first woman to pole vault over five meters, U.S. Open tennis champion Kim Clijsters and Swedish golfer Annika Sorenstam. Janica Kostelić became the first woman to win four Alpine skiing gold medals after her victory in the women's February's Winter Olympics in Turin. Once again she had to overcome injury and illness to triumph having been forced to pull out of the Olympics downhill because she was unwell. Four years ago she won three gold medals at the Salt Lake City Olympics after fighting back from three knee operations in 12 months.

The Laureus Award, known as the most prestigious sports award worldwide, is given by the Laureus Academy. Croatian tennis player Goran Ivanišević, a Wimbledon Cup winner, is the only other Croatian athlete to have won the Laureus Award. [Photo: Večernji list]

Film: "What Is a Man Without a Mustache?"

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 25 – New York Times featured a review of the Croatian movie "What Is a Man without a Mustache" directed and produced by Hrvoje Hribar, which opens on May 25, 2006 at the Two boots Pioneer Theater, 155 East Third Street, at Avenue A, East Village, New York.

Quirks of fate give shape to "What Is a Man Without a Mustache?" This pleasant if inconsequential romantic comedy from the Croatian director Hrvoje Hribar is distinguished by its good-natured sensibility and rowdy, slightly fabulous tone: a kind of Eastern European magic realism, without the magic.

One gray afternoon, high up in a city construction project, a man without a mustache loses his balance and falls, with an audible splat, to his death. He is survived by his wife, the lovely, impetuous Tatjana [Zrinka Cvitešić] who, under the influence of idiosyncratic mourning, uses the settlement money from his death to purchase the rural hillside where he first wooed her.

Brief News...

• A round-table discussion on the role of women entrepreneurs in the process of Croatia's integration into European Union took place in the Croatian Chamber in Zagreb on May 17, 2006. The event was organized to mark International Women Entrepreneurs' Day. The discussion was held under the auspices of the President of Croatia Stjepan Mesić, who said that women were increasingly assuming leading roles in Croatia's economy and politics. Deputy Prime Minister Jadranka Kosor said that women as entrepreneurs and business owners were more stable and less inclined to lay-offs than their male counterparts and that they had done a lot in promoting women's human rights.

- The European Bank for Reconstruction and Development would assist three urban projects in Croatia lending a total of EUR 27 million [USD 34.9 million] for their implementation. EBRD would provide the funds for the development of the new combined central parking garage and a bus terminal in Rijeka and for the renovation of the bus fleet and for a waste water management project in Pula, both on the northern Adriatic coast.
